Abraham and Emma have been living together for some time, but the other day they had a little disagreement which led to Abraham's arrest. This morning they made it up in court through the good offices of Counsellor Perry. Then they decided to be married.

The Rev. Mr. Hamilton, of Jones M. E. Church, was called into the court to perform the ceremony. Everything went smoothly until the parson asked Abraham if he would cleave to Emma only, when some doubt of his strength seemed to overtake him and he replied:

"Well, I'll do the best I can."

But this would not do and he was obliged to make all the responses after the prescribed form.

"In illustration of the disastrous effects that may readily flow from an unchecked extension of glanders, the following case may be cited: A citizen, worthy and industrious, is engaged in the trucking business in a small way, with about one-half of his capital invested in two horses. One of his horses became infected and was condemned to be destroyed on account of glanders; the stable is infected and must undergo an expensive process of purification; the second horse is also under suspicion and may possibly be condemned at a later period. This unfortunate man's whole stock in trade is put in jeopardy by reason of this infectious disease. Of course, high-cost stock may become infected with glanders as well as the draught class; mankind may also contract the disease from horses."

After the explosion, fire started in the limber and the dry prairie grass. Driven by the wind, the flames moved towards the crowd on foot and on the grand stand. Members from the guard mount prevented the spectators from closing in around the wreck, and the flames were soon extinguished.

No definite cause could be given for the accident, but it is thought that a sudden jar when the wheels of the caisson ran into a deep rut caused the shrapnel to be discharged. The caisson contained ten shrapnel and it is considered a wonder that only one of them was discharged.

Now, with all the attar-of-roses-scented promises contained in this tenoyim, as the marriage contract is termed in Hebrew, there arose some obstacles to their fulfilliment. What the stumbling-block was does not quite clearly appear. At all events, the mar-riage, which was set down for "the fifteenth day in the menth of Shebet, in the year 561 (Feb. 15, 1891), in good luck and in a fortunate hour," did not take place. Sketched on the envelope, in which he had inclosed another missive, was a creeping child, holding in its hand a card, on which was written: creeping child, holding in its hand a card, on which was written:

Policeman Anderson, of the East Sixty-seventh street station, arrested Raimar last evening as he dropped a note in at the basement door. When searched at the police station several pawn tickets for wearing apparel and a watch chain were found on his person. He said he lived alone, did his own cooking on an oll stove, but hoped ason to marry a woman with $5,000, when he would lead an easy life and cook no more.

The bride was, instead, brought to this country by her parents. But oceans of distance could not quench the ardor of Samuel's love. He, too, came to America, and after vainly urging the carrying out of the tenoyim, he brought suit in the City Court, as has been told.

Lawyer Z. Kurzman was Samuel's champion, while Lawyer Abraham Levy, of the Pulitzer Building, protected the interests of Rachel's father.

The lawyers fought the case tooth and nail for fourteen months. Every now and then motions, counter motions and applications for this and that would be made in court. Yesterday K. Heary Rosenberg, Lawyer Levy's managing cark, moved that the case be dismissed for want of prosecution. Incidentally, also, Mr. Rosenberg urged that such a contract as this particular tenoyim was invalid, on grounds of public poley, and that on this ground, also, the case should be dismissed.

Judge Ehrlich, before whom the motion was made, decided that Mr. Rosenberg was right, and accordingly dismissed the case with $50 costs. And now comes the funny part of the story.

NEWARK EPIDEMIC SPREADS

Bealth Authorities Taking Extra Precautions Against Small-Pox. NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 21.-The small pox epidemic is daily becoming more alarming. Five new cases were reported iast night and three yesterday. The cases are scattered about the city, and the health authorities seem wholly unable to confine it to one district.

One case, that of Thomas Frank, caused most uneasiness, as he lives at 272 Halsey street, near the crowded business portion of the town.

The City Dispensary will hereafter be open all day and until 12 at night for vaccination, and the Health office will also be open until 12 at night.

DENY HIPPOLYTE'S ILLNESS.

Haytian Representatives Discredit Reports from Kingston, Jamaica. No credence is given either at the Haytian Consulate or Legation offices in this city to the reports published this morning that President Hippolyte, of the Haytian Republic, was mortally ill, and that a revolution was inevitable.

At the Consulate it was said that no news of the President's illness had been recorded, and as one of the cablegrams published was dated from Kingston, Jamaica, it was considered that that fact alone stamped the report as false.

Minister Clement Haentjen, of the New York office of the Haytian Legation, said he did not believe the reports for two reasons. The first was that Kingston was the headquarters of the revolutionists opposed to the President, and all news adverse to him was dated from that point. The second reason was that on Saturday last, at 6 P M. he received a cablegram from President Hippolyte about state affairs, which made no reference to his health.

Recent telegrams from Port-au-Prince, Hayti, state that there are no less than thirty-six candidates for the Haytian Presidency, and that a revolution was inevitable at the mext election or at Hippolyte's death. recorded, and as one of the cablegrams
